GENERAL GARIBOLDI'S VISIT

TO LONDON.

A big, picturesque man, wearing a soft black hat and a long grey beard, stood in the vestibule of his hotel one morning unfolding, in an interview with a representative of the Pall Mall Gazette and others, the purpose of his visit to London.

It was General Ricciotti Garibaldi, who, while convinced that Italy will shortly come into the war, is anxious in the meantime to raise a voluntary force of thirty or forty thousand men which, with financial help from England, he can do, he declares, quite easily.

But for the fact that he has to rely a little on the use of crutches, one could imagine this lion-hearted man, despite his advancing years, in the forefront of battle. But if he can no longer fight himself he can at least maintain the undying spirit of the Garibaldians and their famous traditions.

HOPING TO MEET LORD KITCHENER.

"In Italy," he began, speaking in the most fluent English, "we are all anxious to take part in the war. I have been to France, and now I have come to England, especially to clear the way for her. I am not here officially, nor do I represent any party. I only represent the Garibaldian tradition, and nothing else."

"I am seeing the Lord Mayor, and I hope to meet Lord Kitchener and other members of the Government. In France I saw President Poincaré, M. Millerand, and General Joffre, amongst others, and when I return they will give me their answer to some questions I have left them."

"Under my four sons in France I have 3,000 men. I want to raise the force from 3,000 to 30,000. You know what an enormous effect the action of volunteers has already produced in England and in France."

THE NEXT GERMAN EFFORT.

"I quite foresee that the Germans will make a tremendous effort. It is probable, and we shall have every available man-in-the-field against it. We hope then to have Italy, Greece, and Roumania in line, with something like two million fresh bayonets."

"In the meantime I can easily collect 30,000 or 40,000 men. In Greece I can always collect a number. We went through two campaigns there. Spain will send me some. There are a lot of men here in London who will come. It would be a mistake not to collect them, since I can do so, and they could do so, in just a few weeks, take the field."

£240,000 NEEDED FROM ENGLAND.

"We want, of course, money to equip them. For Italy it would be a heavy expense and for her to organize volunteers now would be a declaration of war."

"But I do not think that the French Government will refuse to allow me to create the corps in France, to be equipped afterwards where it would be most useful."

"From England I will tell you exactly what I want. I want £240,000 to equip the force and keep it for the next month or two. It could be done for this sum, for we Garibaldians cost very little. We have often had to do without with these one day and bread the next."

"I want £240,000. I am going to see the Lord Mayor and to ask him to put himself at the head of a committee to get it."

"No," he added, in response to a suggestion that he should address a great meeting at the Albert Hall. "I don't want to make a speech that every one will forget. I have refused to accept a meeting of all kinds. I am just here unofficially with the object, however, of clearing the situation for Italy to get to work."

The Old English Squire

of song and story was the one kindly old mortal who certainly knew real comfort.
A generous item in his daily joys was a cool Churchwarden Clay and a pipe full of ripe, mellow tobacco.

Old English Curve Cut carries out that "best tradition of smoke." It is a distinctive old aristocrat among pipe tobaccos. The curved "slice to a pipe full" way in which "Old English" is packed absolutely prevents the tobacco from becoming dry and tender, and preserves its original freshness and fragrance.

It is made for the pipe only—hard pressed, sliced, packed and cured in a slow, even, cool smoke.

Sold by all High-Class Tobaccoists.

ENGLAND IN WAR TIME.

WHERE APPEARANCES MAY BE DECEPTIVE.

A Distant Village.

In Abbots Clayton, writes a special correspondent of The Times, it is commonly understood that there is a war going on somewhere. Many believe that the county is actually involved in it.

The market town, six miles away, is full of Territorials, and sometimes they pass through the village on the march.
On the other side there is a squire who nearly all day without seeing half-a-dozen soldiers they say that next week another town is to be full of regulars.

The squire is from home somewhere, soldiering; and his house is occupied by a foreign gentleman and his family—Belgians, they say. There are more foreigners in other houses. Two or three miles off the east has turned his house into a great hospital for soldiers.
On the other side there is a squire who has put down his horses, dismissed his servants, shut up his house, and moved into lodgings, "because of the war." Abbots Clayton is pretty sure that there is a war going on somewhere.

But it is a long way away, in foreign parts, and it is no concern of Abbots Clayton. True, the person, and the schoolmaster, and Mr. Pope, principal farmer and churchwarden, are always dealing with it—it is always stopping young men in field or road to ask them why they have not "gone away." Abbots Clayton has several answers ready—"It's no concern of ours. My mother couldn't spare me. If they want me, why don't they come and fetch me? And if the person or Mr. Pope goes on to hint at what has been happening in Belgium and to ask whether the same sort of thing should be allowed to happen in Abbots Clayton, Abbots Clayton replies that they won't ever come over here, and, if they did, "it'd shute They."

NON-RECOGNITION.

The truth is that Abbots Clayton does not read its newspapers—at any rate, the part that refers to events happening outside Abbots Clayton and district. The idea of the county is, to some extent, grasped: the idea of England, still less the idea of the Empire, has never taken shape in its mind. Foreign parts are foreign parts; and they are very far away—even further than Scarborough or Dover; and nothing has happened at Abbots Clayton to shake the smooth flow of life, or to bring home the possibility that there might shute We, and with more than a pin-fine shot gun. The apple crop was so plentiful that there is still cider to make, even so long after Christmas as this. The village has its own little industry, which the war has done nothing to increase or to diminish.
There is plenty of the usual work to be done, and as much as usual of the money that can be made by it. And the social evenings at the institute are still in full swing.

For that, among other benefits, Abbots Clayton has Mrs. Bunbury to thank.
Mrs. Bunbury's position is certainly difficult. She has so long and stoutly protested against "militarism," upheld the Germans as a peace-loving and humble nation, and maintained that under the present Government war would never be allowed, that her only refuge now lies in turning her eyes the other way. Mrs.
Bunbury "does not recognise" the war.
And since she is well-to-do and possessive it is safer for others not to "recognise" the war more than they can help.
Least of all by taking active part in it.

ALEXANDRA GAFF.

PRINTERS: Fresh, Friel & Steward,

Soldiering, in Mrs. Bunbury's opinion, "lets down" the village. Soldiers use such dreadful language (that she never heard by accident the familiar speech of her civilian folk?). The Navy and the Marines are the least objectionable; and next come the Territorials. Of the Regular Army, old or new, the less seen and heard the better. That is why the social evenings at the institute are in full swing, and why a good deal of Abbots Clayton "does not recognise" the war.

But it would be unwise to make Mrs.
Bunbury responsible for the opinion of a few extremists. If the Germans were to come, "it'd be no worse off than what we be now."

After this, it may seem strange to find from the list on the church-door that Abbots Clayton has given to the services one in 16 of its total population. Most of them have joined the Territorials because the Territorial districtively belong to the county, besides being honoured by the reluctant sanction of Mrs. Bunbury; but joined the army they have. Mrs.
Bunbury's influence is, counteracted by others besides those of the pertinacious person and Mr. Pope. There is example —the example of Mr. Pope's own son, who was one of the first to "go away." There is the influence of the girls; the best of them show a strong preference for khaki over corduroy, and the recruit, enjoying the frequent leave home which the county seems to permit, gets all the attention. And there is the influence of the right sort of mother. She may make a fuss at first; may even go so far as to talk about "disgracing the family," so hardly do old notions die in distant villages. But wait till she sees her son in his uniform. Her pride is almost enough to drive away that grating thought—"I love my son as dearly as Mrs. Bunbury here; why should I be giving notice, while she keeps hers at home?" On the whole, then, Abbots Clayton does much better than it talks; and if only an Aviatik would "drop a bomb among Mrs. Bunbury's glass-houses, very likely every able-bodied man would have enlisted before sunset.
Fine soldiers they would make, too. But it is imagination that is chiefly wanting —imagination more than pluck or energy; the power of seeing Abbots Clayton, not as the centre of the universe, nor even of the county, but as part of England, and England as part of the British Empire.

THE VILLAGE SPIE.

On occasion, however, Abbots Clayton's imagination can be brisk. Mr.
Thomas Hardy writes of "One of those suggested spots outside the gates of the world where may usually be found more meditation than action, and more listlessness than meditation; where resounding proceeds on narrow premises, and results in inferences wildly imaginative." Such was the process in the famous case of the Abbots Clayton spy. The premises were clear enough: Abbots Clayton, being the centre of the universe, is the place of all others, which the Germans would like to get. If only the foolish foreigners were smart enough to come and take it. Obviously, then, the stranger who came poking his nose about the village in late August was a German spy. He leaned over a fence; he peered into farmyards and gardens; he wandered in the lanes by night, looking, always looking. And after two or three days the stranger came to the person, in his own church, to pour out a piteous tale.

He had been insulted in the village; he had been refused food at an inn; he had been given abrupt notice at the farm where he lodged; he had actually been threatened with shooting. If you live and work all the year round in Abbots Clayton you very likely do not see what there can be in it—its farm-yards and gardens, its wide common, and the ever-changing beauties of colour and light on the distant towers to attract a landscape painter; and landscape painters are better off at Abbots Clayton in war-time. The landscape painter quickly took the person's hint; but since then there have been signals seen flashing by night from this hill or that, and many other mysterious goings-on. Unfortunately, too, more than one social class in Abbots Clayton and the neighbourhood has allowed its reasoning to proceed on narrow premises, and result in inferences wildly imaginative.

This is hardly surprising when it is remembered that for many there is little left to do nowadays except talk—and wait. While for the farm-hand and the labourer life goes on exactly as usual, there are others whose a state of war has all but entirely robbed of the pleasant occupations of peace. Among the "better end" (if we borrow from Cheshire a phrase unknown in Devon) the usual amusements of winter life are lacking this winter. There is hardly any one to hunt or to shoot. There are no dances; there are very few children's parties; and there is not a full day's occupation for all in misleading to the handful of refugees.
True, there is knitting; and the ladies knit. They knit at meals; they have even suggested to the person that they might be allowed to knit while he preaches. Many of them are living very quietly, so that they may keep on their mind-errands. These are not jolly times for the "better end" round Abbots Clayton.

A Natural
Remedy

Time was when disease was thought to be due to the direct influence of evil spirits, and exorcism and magic were invoked to cast it out.

Science has taught us wisdom. The evil spirits exist still. We call them "Disease Germs," and they also must be cast out. Once lodged in the stomach or intestines, fever with its hallucinations, or biliousness with its aches and pains, is the result.

ENO'S
FRUIT SALT

is the approved remedy for driving out disease germs. Its action is quick and thorough. It cleans the intestines, rouses the torpid liver to new life, stimulates the mucous membrane to a healthy action, and cleanses and invigorates the whole digestive tract.

It may be safely taken at any time by young or old.

It is very effective in the early stage of Diarrhoea by removing the irritating cause.

THE PROGRESS OF THE WAR.

(Reuter's Service to the China Mail.)

THE TERRIFIC FIGHTING AT NEUVE CHAPELLE.

LONDON, March 28.
Eye-witness at Headquarters says that Neuve Chapelle to-day suggests that an earthquake has occurred there. The very dead have been uprooted in the Churchyard and were buried later under a fall of masonry from the Church.

In the region of the trenches there were bright, yellow fungus growths, due to lyddite.
The German trenches were inferior to ours. The sanitation was bad, and it is evident that the senior officers had not inspected them.
Behind our lines there are groups of British graves. All have wooden crosses erected on them, with the names of the fallen attached, and many have already been turfed and decorated with flowers.

THE SUBMARINE ATTACK ON THE "VOGES."

The wounded from the Voges which was sunk by shellfire from a German submarine sixty miles southwest of St. Ann's Head on Saturday include a Belgian lady passenger, and a boy of 16. All are lodged at Truro Infirmary. They narrate that the Captain ignored the signal of the submarine to leave to, and a duel of seamanship ensued. The Voges manoeuvred and got the submarine astern, and thus the vessel was unable to use her torpedoes. A blank shot failing to take effect, the submarine fired her shell.

The Captain of the Voges and three officers were on the bridge, and the crew at their stations. The engineers and stokers were working their hardest, but the submarine was apparently one of the latest type, though it did not display its number, and it easily overhauled the Voges.
Sometimes the submarine was only 300 yards distant, and the shelling had a terrible effect. A shot hit the Voges under water, but the crew kept to their task. Then a shell killed the Chief Engineer outright, while he was encouraging the stokers.

Altogether twenty shells were fired. The main target was apparently the bridge. All the officers, with one exception, were wounded, and the second mate was badly wounded. The deck and fittings of the ship were torn to ribbons, and the bridge was like a sieve. Still the Voges did not slacken speed, and after two hours the submarine abandoned the chase, but a large shot ripped a huge hole on the water line, torrents of water pouring in.
The Captain clambered over the side and was almost sucked in by the rush of water. Then a patrol boat was sighted, responded to their signals, and rescued the crew.
The Captain said:—"I am thankful the submarine disappeared not knowing that the Voges had been vitally hit. If I had had a gun there would have been one submarine less."

A SPECIAL WAR MEDAL FOR THE "WAR LORD."

THE BRITISH AIR RAID AT HOBOKEN.

THE BOSPHOROUS BOMBARDED BY THE RUSSIAN FLEET.

LONDON, Mar. 29.
A Petrograd communique says that the Black Sea Fleet yesterday bombarded the outside forts and batteries at the Bosphorus on both sides of the Straits.
Observations from the ships and by aviators show that the shells from the Fleet fell with great exactitude on the Bosphorus. Aviators flying above the Turkish batteries dropped bombs successfully, and escaped the enemy's heavy gunfire.

The enemy's destroyers tried to come out, but they were driven back into the Straits by the fire of our guns. A large four-masted ship which was trying to enter the Bosphorus was bombarded by us, and she finally heeled over and blew up.

GERMANY PROVOKING THE NETHERLANDS.

REMARKABLE STATEMENT BY A FORMER FRENCH MINISTER.

London, Mar. 29. A telegram from Paris states that the ex-Minister, M. Pichon, writes that Germany is deliberately provoking the Netherlands, and suggests that the object is to obtain more suitable naval bases in view of the "eventual battle" between the British and German fleets, which, sooner or later, declares M. Pichon, is inevitable.

ANOTHER SUBMARINE OUTRAGE.

INHUMAN CONDUCT OF THE GERMANS.

London, Mar. 29, 5.10 p.m. The outward bound West African mail liner "Fulda," a vessel of 4,800 tons, carrying 140 passengers and a crew of 120, was torpedoed off Milford Haven. A tow-boat towed about 140 of the passengers and crew. The survivors relate that the submarine circled around the people. The "Fulda" was an Elder, Dempster liner of 4,800 tons gross, built in 1906 at Belfast. She was 280.5 feet long, of 17.4 beam, and 10.2 deep. She had two decks and a shelter deck. —Ed.

ANOTHER BRITISH CAPTAIN'S HEROISM.

London, March 29, 12.45 p.m. Details of the torpedoing of the steamer "Bluejacket" shows that the Captain and a portion of the crew displayed great heroism. After the crew took to the boats, though the steamer had a very heavy list the Captain returned and boarded her alone. After inspecting the damage he decided to attempt to navigate her to port. Half the crew refused to return, but the others went back and worked the ship, despite a gale and heavy sea, to Southampton. By their plucky conduct 3,500 tons of grain were saved.

ANOTHER GERMAN SUBMARINE SUCCESS.

FULLY IGNORED.

London, Mar. 29, 12.45 p.m. A telegram from Rotterdam states that a German submarine got a surprise in the North Sea yesterday. She was lying eight miles from the Mass Lightship, firing the signal "heave to" when the Great Eastern Railway Co. cargo steamer City of Brussels was sighted. Captain Wyatt ignored the submarine's order and shouted "Put her helm over. I think we can get the blighter." The order was promptly obeyed, and the City of Brussels crossed the spot where the submarine was lying. There is no evidence that the submarine was sunk, though one of the stokers declares that he felt a bump.

GENERAL VON GLUCK WOUNDED.

WESTERN FRONT COMPARATIVELY QUIET.

London, Mar. 29. A telegram from Amsterdam states that a Berlin official message says that the western front is comparatively quiet. General von Gluck was slightly wounded by shrapnel, while inspecting advanced positions in the Argonne.

LATEST CASUALTIES.

London, Mar. 29, 6.5 p.m. Killed.—C. N. Andrews, E. Odling, F. Schroder, G. H. Wyndham. Wounded.—E. Kertland, T. Noget, W. Ockelton, A. W. Pagen, C. G. Phillips (Lancashire), H. R. Russell, D. Sheridan and H. M. Worsley.

RUSSIA'S BALTIC FLEET TO BE RE-INFORCED.

London, Mar. 29, 3.30 p.m. A telegram from Petrograd states it is announced that the Russian Fleet in the Baltic Sea has been reinforced by modern fighting units which affords additional strength to the Russian coast towns. This statement will have an important bearing on the whole naval question, since Russia laid down four dreadnoughts in 1909, and four super dreadnoughts with nine fourteen inch guns in 1912.

THE ATTACK ON S. S. VOSGES.

The following further particulars are to hand of the submarine attack on the "Vosges," which was sunk by a German submarine sixty miles from St. Ann's Head on Saturday:—The captain, interviewed, said that five passengers who had volunteered, stripped to the waist and assisted the stokers. During the shelling the "Vosges" tried to ram the submarine but was unsuccessful. They fired rockets continually for help. Three boats were destroyed by shell, which also carried off the British Ensign, which, however, was quickly replaced. The steward attended the wounded. After the submarine disappeared, the Vosges continued at full speed for an hour with her pumps working. They met a patrol boat, which took them in tow. Shortly afterwards, the Vosges sinking they all took to the remaining boats in the most orderly manner. The crew rowed to the patrol boat singing "Tipperary."

THE GERMAN IMPERIAL LOAN.

Paris, Mar. 29. A telegram circulated by the Wolfe Agency reports that the German Imperial Loan has reached more than 90 millions of marks. The Norwegian Gazette (Verdens Gang) asserts that the loan is more apparent than real, and deplores that Germany does not more clearly state the situation.

SCOTTISH LETTER.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Edinburgh, Feb. 25.

The late Lieutenant James A. O. Brooke, Assistant Adjutant of the 2nd Gordon Highlanders, who was awarded the V. C. for bravery in an action at Ypres on the 25th October, was the eldest son of Captain Henry Brooke of Stirling, Aberdeenshire, himself a former officer of the regiment. Lieutenant MacKenzie, who was in the same trench with Lieutenant Brooke, gives an account of the gallant act which gained the coveted distinction. After stating that he and Brooke placed himself at the head of a mixed body of troops, consisting of Grenadiers, Cameron, Black Watch, and Gordons, he writes:—"We were feeling rather a severe strain, but Lieutenant Brooke took charge of the whole line, and began to sing that hymn which was to turn out all right. He went from right to left of the line, absolutely regardless of all danger, and at last he gave the orders for a general advance."

When we got into the support trench, we found that the Germans were occupying the first trench, about 200 yards in front of us, and from that position started to pepper us. It was a very fine position, and I saw Lieutenant Brooke, who was on the left of the trench, twice leave it and double back to home to get a new supply of ammunition. He had about 25 yards in the open to cover, and each time, going and coming, I saw dozens of bullets splattering round dust off the brick wall of the trench. There was Second Lieutenant of the Grenadiers, a man who I call "My God," who was our Assistant Adjutant, and the comment was, "Well, he was a devilish brave fellow." And so he was. He was perfectly splendid; but I suppose it was less than a couple of minutes simply for support on our right.
